ONE OF OURS

Wins Pulitzer Prize

Story of Iowa farm boy, in peace and war, adjudged best American novel.

Willa Cather has been awarded the Pulitzer Prize for 1923 for her great novel, ONE OF OURS. The announcement was made by Columbia University which awards the prize for "the American novel which best presents the wholesome atmosphere of American life and the highest standard of American manners and manhood."

ONE OF OURS, since its date of publication last September has been a "best seller." The official report of sales of booksellers all over the country has shown this novel among the twenty leaders each month continuously although the others are nearly all books of the Spring season.

ONE OF OURS will live. We predicted it at its publication. Our prediction has been confirmed by the wide praise it received from the most prominent literary critics throughout the country and now by this crowning award.

A WORD IN SEASON

PUBLISHERS, especially those who have issued a few books only, as well as those who are "new-comers" in the business, are naturally desirous of having information about their publications on file in all bookstores and public libraries.

HOW CAN THIS BE DONE EFFECTIVELY
AT MINIMUM COST?

Here is the answer! If your list of publications is included in the PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL, the standard reference book for more than fifty years, it is filed where it can be referred to instantly in any bookstore or public library. If included in the ANNUAL it cannot be lost or mislaid.

The cost for inserting a list is very small, as low as $5.00 according to space required, and this trifling cost saves the publisher the expense of printing and postage in order to mail his list direct to the buyers.

Write for full information, which will be promptly furnished.

Now is the time to act.

Vacation Reading Plans

WRITERS and producers of books have frequent cause to envy the completeness of distribution which magazine publishers attain. No city business corner is too inconspicuous to be without its magazine display and no town or crossroads too far afield to be lacking in prompt magazine deliveries.

Especially at vacation time does this difference become evident, as, once it gets beyond city limits, the chances that a book loving family will have opportunity to look over a collection of books for summer reading become small. If there could be flashed upon every vacationist's memory in June a picture of the inadequacies of last July's reading table at summer camp or hotel, there would be a scamper to the bookstores before the trunks were closed, and among the selections would be not only books for the old and for the young but books that belong to both for reading aloud in the family circle or for the pocket of the tramping outfit.

One thing that the country-wide display of the "Take Along A Book" poster may do is to bring about by its reiterated message a wide consciousness of the need of books in all vacation preparations. This is something that no single bookshop can adequately accomplish by itself, but each shop with vacation book displays gains by the fact that hundreds of others are emphasizing the same idea.

Beside the opportunity of providing books to the vacationist who is just getting away, the bookseller has the chance of further extending his summer book service by the mails which can reach to the most obscure camp addresses. The store's old customers are helped by reading suggestions from a summer catalog, and new customers are often secured for year round relationships by a summer contact.

One other group of buyers furnishes a large nucleus for vacation reading purchases, and that is those who would send gifts to the houses where they have been entertained. Flowers, candy and books are among the acceptable and correct thank-yous, but only books can be sure of reaching distant points in perfect condition.

What the book-trade needs to accomplish in June is a more thoro planting of the vacation book idea. It can be done by joint effort. The results will be felt for the whole season. Few will be able to forget to "Take Along A Book."

Authors and Magnates Confer

A VERY ambitious conference on the Arts of the Motion Picture is to be held at the Hotel Astor next week, sponsored by Adolph Zukor and by the Authors' League. The relation of the film to the book is one of the subjects up for consideration.

There is need for clearer understanding on both sides. The producers have owed much to the writers of books for plots and for prestige-carrying titles, and, to be sure, have often paid liberally for the rights. But once having acquired the rights, it has seemed to the authors that they have often paid too little attention to the book as written and produced from it anything but a close rendering of the author's work. The author has often protested that his work was cheapened and belittled by the scenario produced. The producer needs to understand better the feeling that every real author must have toward the artistic integrity of his book, which should not be disarranged for any but the most necessary of reasons.

The authors, on the other hand, need to obtain a clearer understanding of the exigencies of continuity and problems of photography, so that they may make some allowances for the divergences between film and book. Just at present the author is likely to understand more about the film problems than the producer is to understand the author's artistic standards. Often the producer thinks that money is the only thing that talks to the author. If that were the case, he probably would not have been an author.

As to Business Conditions

IT is rather strong testimony to the effect of all the recent discussion and charting of business conditions that the suggestion of Secretary Hoover that the government take practical cognizance of business cycles should have been received with so little surprise. Mr. Hoover's idea is that the government should put forward some of its most important construction projects during dull business years and stay out of the competition with other construction enterprises during the peak of activity.

The same idea would seem to be holding good in the general comment on business conditions. In the very dull times of two years ago, business prophets were taking columns in the papers, putting forward optimistic utterances, and, now that optimism in business, as far as the figures are concerned, is prevalent, the note of care and caution is being everywhere sounded. Thus, when the figures are pessimistic, the business forecaster sounds optimism, and, when the figures are optimistic, the forecaster sounds the note of caution, thus keeping the supply of actual optimism and professional optimism separated.

This is perhaps the first time in the history of this country that a period of great business activity has been approached with recurrent comments of caution and warning, and this may well bring about sounder conditions in the business revival that will give it a long and helpful extension. The figures since the turn of the year, judged by practically all the signals that are usually accepted, have shown an extraordinary revival. This revival coming, as it does, early in the spring, gives good reason to think that the whole year will be flavored by prosperity.

The danger which business is warned to look out for is over-expansion, bringing with it inflated prices and a subsequent drop in another season. Costs in the book-making field have already started up, with increases averaging 10 per cent since the first of the year. In spite of the large production of paper in the country, the prices are advancing, and too great anxiety on the part of the manufacturers would put large orders in the field for future delivery, which might again advance the cost. Retailers have learned the value of turnover, and are likely to continue the policy of continuous reordering rather than long distance stocking-up, tho, as far as holding off for lower prices is concerned, the chance of this for 1923 is nil, with rather more likelihood of increases.

While the statistics of business, which have so greatly increased, are of great value to every industry, to such cautions must be added the word, that a confidence in one's own ultimate decisions distinguishes a successful business man from one with but partial success. No year is a poor year to underwrite a really sound business proposition, and the retailers as well as publishers know that there has never been a year so poor but that books which strike the right note can be pushed to a successful distribution.

Books Read on Main Street

IN proportion to population more than twice as many books and magazines are sold in small towns than in the larger cities. The American News Company ran a prize contest for the best letter or essay and has compiled what should be a representative indication of the reading habits of the average small-town resident. These reports are from forty-two states and provinces in the United States and Canada. One hundred and eighty-six reports were used as the basis for the statistics.

Seasonable Displays Create Sales

By Ernest A. Dench

DO you find that the sales of books begin to drop off once the hot weather is with us?

If so, have you ever tried to analyze why this is so?

We know the first thing that will occur to you is that folks do little summer reading because they are outdoors all the time.

This is true—up to a certain extent. But have you ever noticed on a crowded train to a summer resort the books that are brought out from bags and suitcases to pass the time away pleasantly?

Have you observed the large number of vacationers who lie in comfort on the beach, lawn or camping grounds with a book to while away idle hours?

People don't do their reading indoors by a shaded lamp and a comfortable log fire, as in the winter. They adapt themselves to the season—and this is exactly what you should do. No half-hearted attempts to feature books in summer will accomplish worth-while results.

Your windows should offer vacation suggestions. Last summer we explored a number of Canadian cities and were highly elated to find so many stores with appropriate window displays, some of which we pass along for your possible use.

The summer "atmosphere" in fiction displays need not be along cut and dried lines. A window display that got away from the conventional was that of N. H. Forsyth and Co., Hastings Street, Vancouver, B. C. Stacks of novels for summer reading filled up most of the available space, but room was found at the front center for a handsome large vase, which was filled to capacity with long-stemmed field daisies. Beside the vase was placed the following showcard:

A DAISY PLACE TO BUY BOOKS

No stunts, no elaborate effects. Simplicity caused this display to be a drawing card.

The Saskatoon News Agency, Saskatoon, Sask., grouped fiction, both for youngsters and adults, in a pleasing display. The idea was to appeal to the tastes of both youngsters and grown-ups while on vacation. Cards were employed to advance the following arguments.

VACATION TIME MEANS READING TIME

These Books are all picked titles.
Do you know any of these titles?
Come inside and see them. You are always welcome whether you buy or not.

C. W. Rainbow and Co., Medicine Hat, Alta, hung the latest works of fiction on little individual racks attached to the rear panelled wall. The books were arranged to form the letter X over the blue wallpaper covered panels. Each panel forming the background was about six inches wide, with one book placed a little higher on each panel. About twenty latest books were represented in this X shaped design. Special offerings in fiction at $1.25 apiece were placed upright on the floor.

The Canada Drug and Book Co., Ltd., Regina, Sask., employed window cards among the fiction to suggest holiday uses. Here are a few of the suggestions advanced in this convincing manner:

For Camp or Cottage.
For Field or Stream.
For the Week-end, Take Books.
Rain or Shine, Take Books.
Popular Fiction for Your Vacation
Reading.

Canadian authors have come to the fore in recent years and Russell-Lang and Co., Winnipeg, Man., helped increase their popularity via the window display route. The trim featured novels by Canadian authors, the books being arranged on the floor in mass formation, as well as on shelves at the sides. About eighty different Canadian, American and British novels were on show. The idea of mixing up the nationalities of authors was to test the knowledge of competitors in discovering novels by their own countrymen. A card at the middle of the window delivered the conditions of the contest. Competitors had to furnish a complete list of the Canadian authors represented in the display. Book prizes were offered for the correct or nearest correct lists presented by competitors. The window contest aroused a lot of local interest and helped to stimulate fiction sales.

Fiction by Canadian authors was also pushed in a window display by Tyrell's Book Store, Toronto, Ont. There, book window display adian authors were distributed about the novels on exhibition, while a card announced that Canada has produced some clever authors among them Ralph Connor and Stephen Leacock.

Birthday and vacation days offer opportunities for summer book presents. The gift appeal predominated in a display by M. C. Ainslie and Co., Ltd., College Street, Toronto, Ont. A card placed at the rear center was captioned as below:

CHOOSE BOOKS

They are a charming compliment to the man or woman for whom they are purchased.

Books were placed upright in fours across the rear, some of the novels being arranged one above the other in tiers. More books were placed flat on the floor down in front.

It is good sales strategy to break away from the obvious in book displays once in a while. Take a cue from the Robert Simpson Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont. There, book window display effort was characterized by a sectional bookcase, one section of which was filled with the latest novels, while other sections held the popular classics. The life-like wax figure of a neatly dressed man (which could be borrowed from some wearing apparel store) stood beside the bookcase examining one of the latest novels. Every spectator let curiosity get the better of him and paused before the window to see what novel the man was holding.

Robert Duncan and Co., Ltd., Hamilton, Ont., gave over an entire display to a popular novel of "The Sheik" type. The display had added timeliness because it appeared at the same time as a photoplay version of the book was being presented at one of the local theaters. The floor and rear were stacked with copies of the novel, the name of same being emphasised by about twenty toy balloons that fluttered about the window. Each balloon bore the name of the novel in bold lettering. Two concealed electric fans at each side of the trim kept the multi-colored balloons in motion all the time. The balloons were suspended from the ceiling on small silken threads. This idea could be carried out with practically every type of novel for summer reading.

Wendell, Holmes, Ltd., London, Ont., employed a large window sign to help sell more summer fiction. The sign bore the following convincing arguments:

TAKE BOOKS AWAY WITH YOU ON YOUR VACATION

A blessed companion is a book; a book fitly chosen is a lifetime friend.

—Douglas Ferrol.

When you pack your grip to go away, be sure there's a book lying handy on the top where you can get at it easily. No vacation outfit is complete without books—and there's no part of your outfit which you will find so companionable while traveling and during your spare moments.

Put books on your vacation list and remind yourself to buy them here. All the latest novels as well as the most costly bindings.

The sign was adorned in the top left corner by the picture of a typical summer girl reading a book. The latest novels were neatly exhibited on the floor space.

Trimming the background of a show window is not an easy job, especially where books are concerned, for they are too heavy to attach to the background. F. R. Phelan, Montreal, has solved this problem by pinning the lithographed jackets of the novels to the background of his trim, with the books distributed about the floor. This adds a dash of color to the rear and helps to make the display more effective.

The Jarvis Book Store, Banks Street, Ottawa, Ont., cleared out a lot of odds and ends in fiction and other books last summer by holding a Hot Weather Sale. Separate tables inside the store were devoted to these reminders according to the prices at which they were offered. There was a 50c. table, another at 75c., a third at $1.00 and a fourth at $1.50. These tables were well patronized, and publicity was given them by attractive windows and newspaper advertisements.

A Correction

THRU a slip in writing the article, "Brentano's: An Institution," printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of May 19th the name of Lowell Brentano was mentioned as the manager of the publishing department. While Mr. Brentano is connected with that branch of the business, the responsible director is Charles J. Herold who has been in charge of it for a number of years.

Thomas E. Kirby's Last Auction Sale

THE American Art Association closed the season with the sale of selections from the libraries of Judge Martin A. Knapp of Washington, Nathan Gallizer of Cincinnati, Charles F. Kennedy of Brewer, Maine, an English nobleman, and others, including the Dujardin collection of autograph letters of George Moore, on May 14, 15 and 16, the 1,004 lots bringing $32,608.

Thomas E. Kirby presided at the fourth session and it will be memorable because it was his last auction sale. He bade farewell as an auctioneer in the following preliminary words:

"Ladies and gentlemen, your attention please, we will begin the sale now we have got thru this flashlight business. Inasmuch as I started in this business in the book department some sixty-five years ago (no doubt before some of you were born), in other words, 1858, I deemed it quite appropriate that I should conduct the last sale of books, or any other personal property to be held this season by the present American Art Association, for on the first of June the new commanders come in and take command of this great ship and I want to say that I most heartily wish them every success and I feel sure that with your patronage and that of the numerous other patrons of this establishment and the art buying and literary buying public in giving their support, they will sail this ship in smooth waters. I can only extend to them an old Chinese sentiment which I think fills the bill, 'Prosperity as great as the mountains, blessings as expansive as the sea,' that I wish them most heartily.

"It is of great regret to me that I shall not have you before me again as an audience at sales. I am not saying goodbye, rather au revoir, because I do not expect to meet you again in the auction rooms, but socially and in a friendly manner—frequently, because that is my desire. I especially express that to you who are here, because you are interested in books, and it is my intention, as you have probably seen in the papers, to write my reminiscences and have to keep in touch with the book-trade, because I want to sell many copies. Subscriptions will be taken as you leave. I don't know what Doubleday, Page are going to charge, but it will take me a great many years, because I must go back to 1858 when I started.

"There is no need of my making extended remarks—I do not intend to do it—in fact, I am going to do just as the Englishman in the automobile business did when he came to this country and was invited to a banquet. He was asked to address them and after the speaker had made a lengthy speech, he started his address—'Ladies and gentlemen. I will not keep you long, for in my business I have found the longer the spoke, the bigger the tire.'"

Started sale (an afterthought to members of the press particularly). "Please do not convey the idea to the public as has been conveyed in some of the papers, that Mr. Thomas E. Kirby is a decrepit old man, that he is going out of business because of his age—some place me in the eighties, but in fact I will only acknowledge seventy-six and I want to say I am going out while I can walk out erect—I am not waiting to creep out on my hands and knees, nor to be carried out. I played eighteen holes of golf yesterday and beat my man. I expect to play eighteen tomorrow. I am going thru this sale—so please dispell the idea about the decrepit Mr. Kirby in the eighties!"

This concluding sale contained some very notable items. A few of the more important lots and the prices realized were:

Collected set of Dicken's "Writings," 55

vols., calf, by Bedford, London, 1836-82, first edition, $1,300; collected set of the first editions of George Eliot's "Writings," 34 vols., levant be Reviere, London, 1858-85, $320; a collected set of the first editions of Rudyard Kipling's "Works," 38 vols., Lahore, London, Allahabad, 1885-1910, including some of his earlier publications, $1,100; collected set of the first editions of Charles Lever's "Works," 56 vols., morocco, by Reviere, Dublin, London and Edinburgh, 1839-79, $490; collection of 246 autograph letters written by George Moore to his close friend and mentor, Edouard Dujardin, 1885-1922, $675; a collected set of Sir Walter Scott's "Waverly Novels," 74 vols., calf, by Morrell, Edinburgh, 1814-32, $675; The Sporting Magazine, 1792-1870, 156 vols., together with The Racing Calendar, 1843-1870, 9 vols., in all, 165 vols., polished calf, London, 1792-1870, $1,325; a collected set of the first editions of Robert Louis Stevenson, 44 vols., levant, by Birdsall, London, 1878-1906, $1,125.

Good Book-Making

THREE art books of unusual beauty have been received from E. P. Dutton & Company. All three have unusual interest to lovers of good typography. The volume on "J. Alden Weir," with presswork by D. B. Updike, is a square quarto volume, first published by the Century Association and taken over from them by Duncan Phillips to be known as the Phillips Publications Number 1. There were eight illustrations added to the original edition. The title page is given a touch of rare beauty by the little rotogravure picture of an artist at work, printed in a very deep blue with the first line of the title-page in the same color. The text is heavily leaded, but the result obtained is exactly suited to an art book of this character. The art reproductions on tints do not jar with the text. The beginning of such a series of books in connection with the opening of the Phillips Memorial Art Gallery in Washington promises interesting results for book printing as well as for art collecting. Co-operating with Duncan Phillips in the preparation of these books are Royal Cortissoz, Guy Pène du Bois and others.

The second book in the series is on "Honoré Daumier," a square octavo printed by William Edwin Rudge. The illustrations are grouped together in the back, taking a little more than half the book, and both text and illustrations are printed on a tinted paper. The presswork and general design leave nothing to be desired.

The sponsors for this series of publications announce that they will later undertake a second series of books that will cover living artists.

The third art book from Dutton is not related to the Phillips series, but is one of the beautiful volumes for which A. E. Gallatin is responsible. The volume is entitled "American Water Colourists," and there are thirty illustrations. The printing was done by Bruce Rogers and William Edwin Rudge in co-operation. An interesting color effect for the board side has been tried, silverish paper with manila label.

Mr. Updike is responsible for the typography of "Dr. Johnson," a play by A. Edward Newton, which the Atlantic Monthly Press has published in a most attractive format. It is a broad octavo with two color title-page and also a two color preface in the form of a reproduction of an old playbill. The frontispiece in color is interesting because of its being a reproduction of a painting by Reynolds which Mr. Newton owns. We somehow believe that the other illustrations seem less appropriate in their method of reproduction for inclusion between this typographical setting.

The Marshall Jones Company has printed a beautiful book for the American Institute of Architects, a volume on "The Significance of the Fine Arts." The presswork is from the McGrath-Sherrill Press, Boston. The numerous half-tone pictures are printed on both sides of the inserts and toned effectively to fit the text. The title-page, contents, pages and index seem all in keeping with the book, and the binding and sewing and gilt top complete an ideal volume of the kind.

Houghton Mifflin Company has made an attractive octavo of "The Bethlehem Bach Choir" by Raymond Walters, first issued five years ago. The binding is especially well designed, and the book runs pleasantly thru the hand.

Another attractive octavo comes from Henry Holt & Company entitled "Redeeming Old Homes" by Amelia Leavitt Hill. The press-work is especially good, and the half-tones, also.

For a book in the social field, unusual care has been taken with the University of Chicago Press volume on "The Hobo" by Nels Anderson.

A new textbook showing the best features of the present American textbook making is "America: A History of Our Country" by William J. Long (Ginn & Company). Textbook publishers have developed an unusual group of artists who can reproduce historical scenes in black and white, the type of illustration that does not get as much opportunity as it should in other fields of bookmaking. The work of Sears Gallagher and Rodney Thomson in this volume is especially good. N. C. Wyeth has supplied a series of characteristic colored plates.

An interesting type page has been selected by Brentano for a new series of plays called British Drama League Library, number one of which is "False Premises" by Laurence Housman, and another good volume in the drama field is "Peer Gynt," Scribner's Theatre Guild edition, a most attractive volume with admirable title-page in two colors.

Doubleday, Page & Company have been putting out an attractive group of novels with clean-cut printing, including "The House by the Windmill" by Agnes E. Rothery, "The Day's Journey" by W. B. Maxwell and "Black Buttes" by Clarence E. Mulford.

Another novel very pleasant to the eye and hand is "Under A Thousand Eyes" by Florence Bingham Livingston, the illustrations of which and the attractive wrapper add to the selling quality. Not many volumes of fiction now boast of more than a frontispiece.

Characteristic of Dodd, Mead's attractive 12mo. is a novel, "The Chaste Diana" by E. Barrington.

Macmillan has made an attractive 12mo. of the novel "A Friend at Court" by Leon and Elizabeth Stern.

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of June 16th will be especially devoted to the discussion of the arts of book making.

New York Play Condemned by Court

ON May 23rd, the New York Court of General Sessions, Judge John F. McIntyre presiding, declared, after jury trial, that the theatrical company who were producing "God of Vengeance" by Sholom Asch were guilty of producing an immoral play and were sentenced to fine or imprisonment, the amount of the fine not being fixed yet. Sholom Asch is one of the leading literary men of the Jewish race.

The play has been produced all over Europe and acted frequently in the Yiddish theaters of New York. It was first presented in English in the Provincetown Theater, and later moved to a larger house. The principal part was taken by Rudolph Schildkraut, father of Joseph Schildkraut, who took the leading part in "Liliom."

The play is the story of a brothel keeper who tries to bring his daughter up in the purest way, but she is drawn down into the immoral atmosphere of his business. The court, referring to the citations, of similar phraseology which the defendants' lawyer had made from Shakespeare, said that there could be no such comparisons allowed, as Elizabethan conditions were utterly different from those of today. The judge insisted that the play must be judged as a whole and not on isolated lines. "Even tho a moral lesson was to be taught," he said "this cannot be done by lines or words or actions that might amount to immorality or obscenity. The people of the State of New York are anxious to have pure drama. Decency should be upheld, and anybody who disregards decency and who portrays obscenity may be regarded as guilty."

The New York press is a unit against the decision, tho several have pointed out that the method of trial before jury was satisfactory. The plan of submitting plays to a jury selected from a panel of three hundred, as arranged last year among producers, authors and the city government, was not tried out, in this instance, as the producer of this play was not a member of the association in the agreement.

Typical of the press comment is that of the New York Evening Post, which says, "The fact remains that the verdict is highly regrettable. A majority of the best equipped critics have found the play not immoral, but purgative. Serious objection may well be taken to one sentence in Justice McIntyre's charge. A moral lesson, he said, cannot legally be taught 'by words, lines, or actions that might amount to immorality or obscenity.' That is, no play, however moral in total effect, may contain lines or actions that in isolation are immoral."

Little Talks With the Sales Force

By James Lackington, Jr.

XXX. THE DETROIT CONVENTION

NEEDLESS to say, Mr. Brown had been greatly disappointed when Mr. Partland's sudden illness had made it impossible for him to attend the Detroit convention, particularly when he had been honored by being placed on the program. He took the disappointment philosophically, however, for he had lived long enough to know that such things must come to every one and that disappointments should be counted more or less routine if one is to live a reasonably happy life. On Tuesday, he called up Mr. Crandall of Crandall's Bookstore and asked him if he would not like to tell the class a little something about the convention. The best of feeling had prevailed for years between the two stores and Mr. Crandall after a moment's affectation of hesitancy willingly consented. So when the class met at the usual hour, Mr. Brown had no need for his little black book, but introduced Mr. Crandall after commenting on his kindness and courtesy.

"We were all exceedingly sorry that Mr. Brown had to miss the convention," Mr. Crandall began, "but I am glad to learn that Mr. Partland is on the mend. A lot of the fellows inquired after you, Mr. Brown. Mr. Melcher, Mr. Kidd, Mr. Nye, Mr. Estabrook and many others wanted to be particularly remembered to you.

"Now as to the convention, I am not going to begin to try to tell you what happened. I'd keep you here until midnight at the least. Fortunately you can get a report in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and it will be a complete report, too. There was a foolish motion taken to expunge some part of the proceedings but later on the members decided that a complete and truthful report should be made. The outstanding thing about the Convention it seemed to me was the definite stand in favor of clean books and the opposition to the further extension of erotic literature. To my mind there is a lot of nonsense about the serious purposes of certain of these writers when the manner in which the books themselves are written clearly reveals that big sales and large royalties are what the author had mostly in mind when writing. In the long run I believe and I know very well that Mr. Brown believes that our trade will most prosper as we sell good books, worthy books, the possession of which is a source of pride with the owner. I think I detect a decided trend against the fervid type of literature, a very natural reaction and I do not think that the problem will very long be an important one. Of course, we will always have books that present moral questions for us but the day of the deluge of what are euphonistically called 'frank' books is fast passing in my opinion.

"If any of you care to really analyze what it is that causes indecency in literature and how a skilful author can treat of the 'facts of life' and yet not offend good taste, I would advise you to read the first chapter in a new book by Professor Erskine of Columbia University. The book is called 'Literary Discipline' and this chapter is entitled 'Decency In Literature.' I wish every author could read it, also every publisher and every bookseller. It is a very keen analysis.

"I was very much interested in the discussion concerning the small town bookstore. There were three really uncommonly good talks by Miss Blanchard, who is with Miss Dodd at Northampton, by Jacob Fris, who runs a bookstore at Holland, Michigan, and by Mrs. Teeter of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. It is a big problem, the getting of books before the people in our smaller cities. I should say the biggest problem we have and I was very much interested to see how these people tackled the job in three quite widely differing communities. There was a little laugh when Mr. Fris mentioned the number of copies he sold of a certain popular seller. I suppose it seemed small but I figured it out in my mind in comparison with our own sales and I should say that his results were easily twice as good as ours. As a matter of fact the great popular successes get reasonably good representation in even the very small communities, but what is needed, and I recognize it is an immensely difficult task, is to arouse a love of good books by means of the continued sale of a well selected stock, however small, of the really worth while.

"I for one, am going to make a very thorough study of Mr. Estabrook's splendid paper on 'The Undeveloped Side of Bookselling.' I believe there is something in it. I believe that we are altogether too perfunctory in our handling of the comparatively few mail orders we get. When you realize how many towns and even cities have little or no bookselling service, it would seem plain that there is a big field for reaching the better class in these places by a mail service intelligently conducted. Here is one phase of it that perhaps we do not think of enough. It is not necessary to have a main street location to do a good mail order business. Here we pay out huge rents in order to be in the thick of things where the people are but were we to develop a good mail order trade we might well rest content with a more modest over the counter business. I really think that good service by mail offers a real opportunity to greatly increase the sale of books in this country.

"The hour is getting on. I can plainly see that it is not going to be possible for us to consider even briefly the high spots of the convention. There were a couple of good conferences and I foresee that such informal discussions will play an increasingly larger part in future discussions. Mr. La Belle of Detroit handled the conference on 'Store Arrangement' and we got so interested in the subjects brought up that we stayed for an hour and forty minutes. We got down to brass tacks and I am sure we all benefited by the other fellow's experience. Miss Cutter's conference on children's books proved so interesting that a second session was called.

"Dr. Rice and Dr. Stidger gave two very stimulating talks, the first showing the value of an ideal of service in any work and particularly in our job, the second describing how the church can be of practical help in furthering the sale of good books. Dr. Stidger's plan for handling the corrupt book situation was to ignore it. I can't quite follow him there myself. But I do believe in working on a white list rather than emphasizing too strongly a black list.

"One of the most stimulating features of the convention was a talk by a Jefferson Webb of Detroit. They all call him Jeff out there and he had been president of the Rotary Club and a lot of other things. He talked about 'Books and the Business Man' and if you will excuse a little slang, atta boy! how he did tell us things. Sharp wit and keen common sense followed each other so fast you could hardly keep up to them. He told us how the appeal of books might be made more strongly to the average business man who wants to read but hasn't time to dig it all out for himself. I know that I am going to benefit by his remarks—no, I won't tell you just how, Mr. Brown. You've got to make your own plans along that line.

"I can't tell you all. I know I had a good time, the entertainment put on by Mr. McKee was novel and clever. He had a 'Parody Outline of Bookselling' at one of the Detroit cafés that was rich. I could listen all night to Mr. Mullen and Mr. Burger in their parody on Gallagher and Shean, and the Parade of the Wooden Waiters as given by the travelling salesmen, the 'best waiters in the book business,' was great. Then we had the costume party given by the Women's National Book Association and a luncheon with a fine concert by the Hudson musical organizations and we went out to the Public Library and listened to a very earnest speech by the librarian, Mr. Strohm, after which we went all thru the fine building; we had a meeting open to the general public at which Dr. Hough, a prominent local minister, and Irving Bacheller spoke. And we went out to the Ford plant. Just a word about the banquet and then I must stop. Senator Ferris gave an inspiring talk that I suppose did more to make us love this game we are in than anything that has happened in a long time.

"Then we had the always good Eddie Guest and Arthur Guiterman, the famous originator of the rhymed review, and a toastmaster whose wit always kept about two jumps ahead of us. Now, I realize that this is all very disjointed. I haven't mentioned all that took place. I haven't time to do it but to me the big thing about these Conventions is the way they bring the members of the trade into friendly relationships. We became a united trade thru the medium of the contacts established at such a gathering as this and the business antagonisms that were rife in the days when we didn't know each other are largely things of the past. Just one word in closing, read your Convention report carefully; it will be of interest and practical value to all of you. Thank you, very much."

June Announcements From

Song For Graduation Day

I've strapped my dusty study books,
I've tossed them far away,
Now I'll tramp the paths of summer time
Quite free—for work or play.

And what shall you give me, sir,
To speed me on my road,
To fill the chinks of lonely hours,
To ease my heavy load?

You cannot give me Romance,
My true love I must find,
Experience I'll meet, alas!
And wealth may lag behind.

You cannot give me Life itself,
Go find a mirror, then,
Where I can see things passing strange—
The lives of other men.

And when the road's not right to tramp,
When all the world's in rain,
I'll turn from life—I'll find your gift—
Come back to books again.

—JOHN FARRAR, Yale, 1919.

Campaign Prize Awarded

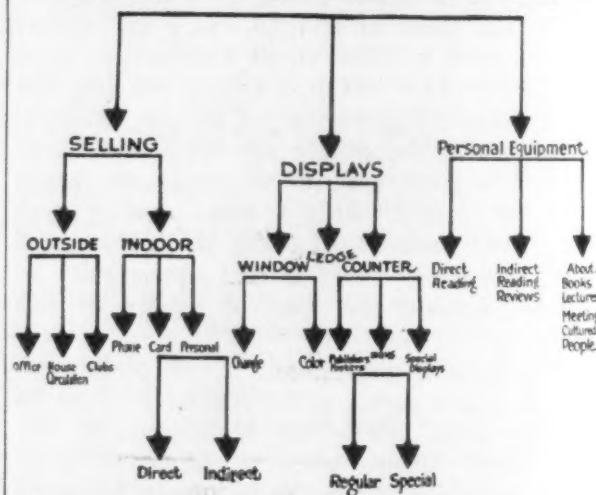

MRS. GERTRUDE MAYNARD of Los Angeles was awarded the prize of a twenty dollar gold piece by the Year 'Round Bookselling Committee for the best exhibit of material used in promoting increased year 'round sales. Many photographs and collections were sent in, but for well-rounded effectiveness, the exhibit of Mrs. Maynard, who is the manager of the Jones Bookstore, received the unanimous approval of the judges. Among other efforts to extend business, she showed a very fine group of street car cards, with miniature reproductions for store use. The award was announced at the convention, at which Mrs. Maynard was the most distant delegate.

The Campaign Committee also offered an award for the best campaign table, a table consecutively used in the store to carry out the different seasonal opportunities to place books before the community. The entries for this contest will close on July 1st, and photographs should be sent to the Campaign office at 334 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Campaign Table Contest

THE Campaign Table photograph prize was not awarded at the Detroit Convention, as requests have been made by dealers for more time. The closing date of the contest, therefore, has been moved to July 1st, which gives ample time for Year-Round members to send in photographs of the Graduation Campaign Table, of the June Books for Better Homes Campaign Table, and the "Take Along a Book" or Vacation Reading Campaign Table. The photographs received will be placed on display at the Year-Round Bookselling Headquarters, where visitors may see them. The prize winner will be announced in the July 15th Year-Round Bookselling News.

The New Transparency

THE new window transparency now being sent out is an attractive interpretation of the slogan "Why Not Books?" which seems to be the most popular bookselling slogan since "Buy a Book a Week." It is appropriate for any book window, on any subject; and is especially effective in newspaper advertisements. "Of course, books," is the instinctive reply to the question.

Just take along a book.
If it's Romance that you're after,

If adventure seems to hold you,
If tales of love enfold you,
Just remember that we told you
To take along a book.

If you're very fond of history,
Pray take along a book.
If your soul is thrilled by mystery,
Sh! Take along a book.
If you want to turn right thrifty,
If you'd learn to dress right nifty,
If you're ten or if you're fifty—
Just take along a book.

The Book and Its Film

Fortnightly News for Booksellers from the Motion Picture Field

AN important feature of the coming International Congress on Motion Picture Arts, which is to be held June 7 and 8 under the auspices of The Authors' League, is the interest the colleges and universities are evidencing in the production of good scenarios.

At Columbia University there is already a course in writing for the motion picture. Yale has begun producing films dealing with historical subjects. Professors at Harvard and Princeton are studying the industry with a view to organizing courses. Representatives from all these institutions will be present at the Congress.

Seriously undertaken, these courses will exert an important and beneficial influence upon the quality of the photoplays being produced. The mechanical end of the business has outdistanced the artistic, there is no lack of money or equipment, but a great dearth of notable stories.

With the appearance of better pictures the connection between books and pictures inevitably will become stronger. Not only will books be dramatised for the screen but the exceptional pictures will be available in book form. The very fact that the Congress on Motion Pictures Arts is being sponsored by the Authors' League is a striking indication that the writers themselves are fully aware both of the need and of the opportunity.

"Main Street" Film

THE film of "Main Street" has been released, and will be running in various sections of the country this summer. The interest in this film as a bookstore connection is increased by the fact that the producers have not relied on an individual star to sell it, but on the general public interest and knowledge of the novel and on the general excellence of the production.

The exhibitors' promotion will be based on reader emphasis and on the general public's interest in the book. They also point to the fact that it is a man and woman play, which is not always true of films. In some towns the exhibitors and bookstores are exchanging mailing lists, so that the book promotion can go to the exhibitors' clients and the exhibitors' promotion to the bookstore clients. It is interesting to note that some of the best organized exhibitors have special, classified mailing lists of book readers to whom to appeal in a film of this kind.

Censoring News Films

THE Court of Appeals at Albany has upheld the chairman of the State Motion Picture Censorship Commission in his exercise of the right to pass upon news films as well as on other motion pictures. The Pathé Exchange, which was involved in a case, contended that the liberty of the press was violated, because the pictures were reproductions of actual news events, simply putting into pictures the same thing that newspapers were printing in words. The lawyer for the Commission pointed out that a similar law in Ohio had been held valid by the United States Supreme Court.

Many Recent Novels Being Screened

IN the past screen versions of popular books usually appeared at least two years after the publication of the book. Now the picture productions are being released within a few months after the book has attained popularity and publicity. Conspicuous examples of this new development are the picture versions now being filmed of "Black Oxen" by First National Pictures, Leroy Scott's "Cordelia the Magnificent" by Metro, and Warner Fabian's "Flaming Youth" which will be directed by Jack Dillon. These are some of the more noticeable instances but there are many other cases almost as striking.

The result of this should be beneficial to both the bookseller and the producer. The emphasis of the film comes at a much better psychological time than when general interest has begun to wane. For even in the case of the best best seller, after a certain time people become weary of hearing too much about the book. The film may revive sales but is probably less effective than if it had been shown at an earlier date.

Zane Grey Will Direct Film

THE photoplay version of Zane Grey's "The Last Man," will be made in the Tonto Basin, where most of the action of the story takes place. It was decided at a conference between Zane Grey and the Famous-Players Lasky Corporation that Grey should personally direct the picture. Work on the production will be begun within the next few weeks.

English Book-Trade News

(From Our London Correspondent)

ONE of London's big stores, the world famous Harrod's, has been holding a gala week. The basic idea was to combine interest for the customer with his purchasing inclination with the shrewd hope that the latter would thereby be commensurately increased, and, perhaps, unknown to himself. Now speaking generally, that was wise psychology, and the results were very flattering to the judgment of the merchandising committee. The keynote was to be found in this announcement: "Harrod's extend to their tens of thousands of patrons and to the public at large an open invitation to share to their heart's content in the wealth of special attractions which this house is privileged to provide during London's great 'Gala Week.'" We would have put it, perhaps, a little differently, and possibly we might have punctuated the paragraph! Anyhow, the reading was plain enough, and the object gained. There was a good brain working at the back of the scheme, for, in addition to the many excellent attractions which the company had laid out for the allurements of their "patrons and public at large," there was arranged a series of "Harrod's Gala Lectures." To complete the ingenuity of the plan, of course, no charge was made for these lectures, and, in consequence, the attendance was very large. The lectures and lecturers were as follows: "Brains" by Sir James Cantlie, K. B. E., "As Others See Us" by Major John Hay Beith, C. B. E. ("Ian Hay") and "Love and Marriage" by W. L. George, while Madame Baird dealt with "Dancing in 1923." So successful were these informal lectures, that we hear other big stores are thinking of following suit. Another source of income for the author, and a very excellent one, too. If it brings buyers to the store generally, it means that it creates business, and therefore the fee should be satisfactory. Moreover, such talks are bound to cause a demand for the authors' books. If they will take a step further and persuade the managements to permit a bright, pleasing, chatty discourse about books generally, these new advertising methods should stimulate bookselling in no uncertain degree. A great deal may be accomplished in this direction.

The National Book-Trade Provident Society held its annual meeting last week. It was a successful gathering. During the past year considerable advance was made in the finances of the Society and in membership. Its funds have reached about $55,000, and there is being made a big effort to raise during the next year or two a further $50,000. W. M. Meredith was again elected president, while the vice presidents include H. E. Alden, managing director of Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Francis Edwards, the famous antiquarian bookseller, Viscount Hambledon, Sir Frederick Macmillan, Sir Algernon Methuen, R. B. Marston, editor of the Publishers' Circular, president of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, with B. H. Blackwell of Oxford as treasurer, all famous names. The committee of management is comprised of publishers and booksellers and assistants, men and women representing both sections of the trade. It is a very democratic body, and is doing good work among those needing help.

By the time these notes are printed, the annual meeting of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland will have been held, and, we hope successfully. There is every prospect of a great and influential gathering in the famous lace town of Nottingham. H. B. Saxton, the well-known bookseller of that town, is working hard to bring a full success to this year's conference. Last year it was held in London. A great number of vital matters are down for consideration, and the outcome should be a number of practical suggestions which should help to co-ordinate bookselling thruout the country. It is just possible something definite will be accomplished in the direction of a concerted effort to further book sales, in which some of us are so tremendously interested. At the dinner to be held on May 26th, the principal guests will be C. F. Clay of the Cambridge University Press and president of the Publishers' Association, Lt. Colonel John Murray, Ian Hay and May Sinclair.

The latest American publisher to arrive in London is Major George Haven Putnam. Major Putnam has such a host of friends among publishers and booksellers that it is doubtful if there is a more welcome publisher from the other side of the Atlantic. It gives everyone very great pleasure to find him as vigorous as ever, physically and mentally. He has been visiting London for more than fifty years. Word reaches us that Mr. Doran is again soon to be here and that Mr. Macauley of the Baker & Taylor Company has arrived, as well as Mr. Brentano.

It is announced that H. G. Wells is to write for the McClure Syndicate, beginning in September, a series of weekly articles dealing with current events in the field of politics, education, economics, etc. The Nonesuch Press is a new publishing house which has established itself in Gerrard Street. The aim of the firm is to achieve typographical excellence in books that people use for continual reading.

The first five books, which will be published in limited editions, will be the letters of George Meredith to Alice Meynell, ready this week; the "Book of Ruth;" the "Poems of Andrew Marvell;" the "Complete Works of William Congreve;" and the "Love Poems of John Donne." The Donne poems will be ready on May 3, printed in the seventeenth Century Fell type.

The University Extension Board of the University of London has arranged a series of three lectures to be given by Dr. A. Compton-Rickett at Gresham College. The lectures will deal with "The Modern Novel and Daily Life," "Modern Poetry and Daily Life," and "The Modern Drama and Daily Life."

Books as "Three in One"

THE discussion of the increased use of books for graduation gifts has brought out the fact that there are several different ways in which books are beginning to take their part at this period of the school year. Books are being given to the scholars as they graduate from one grade to another or from one school to another; they are being used as prizes by the school itself, especially by the private schools which can more easily get funds for that purpose, as a method of reward for special merit; they are being used by the classes themselves as a way of leaving behind them an expression of their love for the Alma Mater. Some graduating classes have given good size collections of books to high schools and colleges instead of planting a tree or leaving a tablet. As the experience of one school is passed on to others, this method is bound to increase, and booksellers will have a great opportunity this year to present the question to the many people who are in and out of their aisles.

A Poetry Bibliography

THE new revision of Monroe and Henderson's "The New Poetry" contains 200 more pages than the old, and the bibliography of the authors is increasingly valuable. There is a list of all the poets whose works are included and a chronological listing of their books, whether in American or in English editions. This feature makes it valuable as a reference book in locating the less known volumes of verse.

A New Centaur Bibliography

THE second volume in a series of very exhaustive American bibliographies has been published by the Centaur Bookshop, Philadelphia. The first one last year was the Hergesheimer, and the new one, compiled by Vincent Starrett, is on Stephen Crane. There are twenty-five different items listed for the collector of Crane books to consider, each one described in the fullest detail. His publishing history begins with "Maggie" in 1893 and ends with "The O'Ruddy" in 1903, with two collected volumes later. The author was able to list a very large amount of magazine material and comment on Mr. Crane and his work.

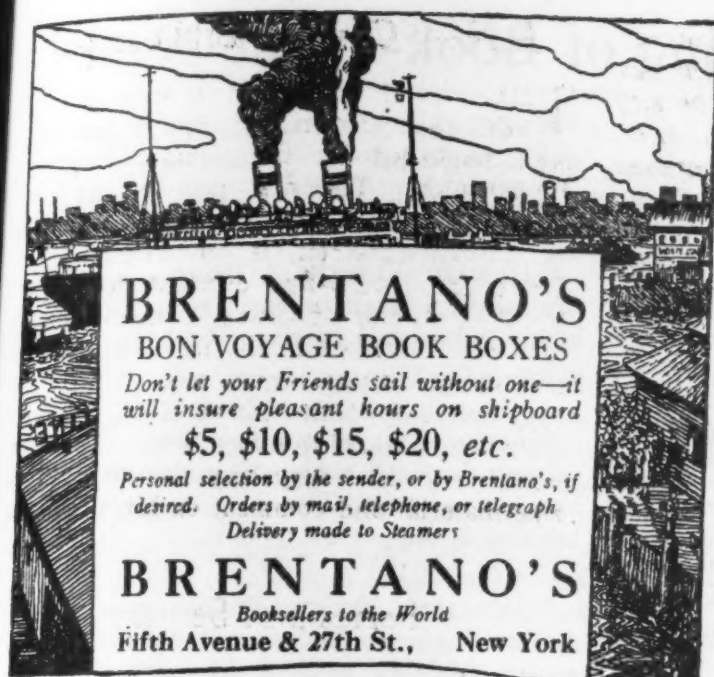

Series and Sequels

A REFERENCE book of much practical use to both booksellers and librarians is the volume entitled "A list of Series and Sequels for Juvenile Readers," published by F. W. Faxon Company, Boston, in revised form. The original list was edited by Katharine H. Wead of the Wilmington Free Library, and the enlarged edition now ready has been prepared by May G. Quigley of the Grand Rapids Library.

The volume will make it possible to give children prompt information as to the order in which books should be read and to fill in gaps in series. Only such series are included as are commonly carried on the public library shelves, yet the extent of our juvenile book series is shown to be very great, and the book has two hundred and sixty-four series or sequels listed.

That the habit of arranging books in series is not new is shown by the mention of Cooper, Dumas and Jacob Abbott. The longest of the series mentioned is the Rollo books, of which there were 14 volumes with a supplemental series of Tours in Europe of 4 volumes. Then there are the Rolt-Wheeler U. S. Service Series of 14 volumes, Amelia Douglas's Little Girl Series of 11, the Patty Series of 11, the Little Colonel Series, 12. It would seem as though at one time the sacred number in connection with series was 6. Sophie May, author of "Dotty Dimple," had 6 different series listed, each one with 6 volumes. Elijah Kellogg of "Elm Island" fame had four series of six volumes each.

The most prolific writer mentioned is Everett T. Tomlinson, who wrote 10 series with 38 volumes; followed by Sophie May, 6 series, 36; Altsheler, 6 series, 28; Kellogg, 5 series, 28; Abbott, 3 series, 28; Barbour, 7 series, 27; Amelia Douglas, 2 series, 26; Heyliger, 5 series, 21.

Bon Voyage Books

THERE is a real opportunity at this season of the year for the bookseller to develop a sizable sale of books by establishing a department to send book boxes to travelers. The reproduction of Brentano's advertisement from a New York newspaper indicates the attractive manner in which such a service may be brought to the readers' attention.

It may seem that the bookseller who is located at a distance from the main sailing points is at a disadvantage in giving such service. However, besides the usual method of sending the books from his own shop, the bookseller may send the order to a jobber in the city of the boat's sailing and for a small charge the jobber will attend to the delivery at the pier.

Selling Thirty Million Books

THE remarkable thing about Haldeman-Julius's publishing record is not the great production system that he has developed but it is the much more difficult problem that he has solved—the merchandising of so vast an output. Three years ago Haldeman-Julius conceived the idea of publishing in quantity "the frankly paper-bound booklet, not a 'little leather edition,' but just a cheap paper-bound book." So in 1919, Haldeman-Julius gave his notes in purchasing The Appeal To Reason, a small Socialistic newspaper, and he became the owner of a small plant and a debt.

On an old hand press, printing four pages at a time, he issued two tiny booklets, "The Rubáiyát," and "The Ballad of Reading Gaol." He had converted The Appeal into a non-political literary journal, The Haldeman-Julius Weekly, and in its columns he advertised the two booklets, fixing the price at twenty-five cents a copy. The books sold so rapidly that he decided to put out fifty well-known classics. He placed a single advertisement in the Sunday edition of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. By Friday night he had received enough orders to insure success.

The business grew rapidly. He extended his list to include a hundred titles. With the installation of specially designed presses and binding and folding machinery he was enabled to cut down his production costs.

Today the Haldeman-Julius list includes three hundred and fifty titles. More are being added each month. At the end of 1922, 31,000,000 copies had been sold and in the month of February, 1923, 6,000,000 copies were marketed. The total sales for 1923 will probably be between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000.

Finally the cost of producing one of the booklets was cut to one cent—after the first edition had absorbed the cost of composition, proofreading and plates.

Haldeman-Julius attributes the success of his venture to his marketing methods. He has advertised in practically every magazine and newspaper in the country. His advertisements have consisted of but three elements: a list of titles, a price, and an order blank.

Besides the newspaper and magazine advertising, two other publications owned by Haldeman-Julius have been of great importance in building sales: The Haldeman-Julius Weekly and a monthly, Life and Letters. These publications are devoted to literary news of all kinds and, of course, include announcement of the plans of the Haldeman-Julius Publishing Company. The two magazines have a combined circulation of over 500,000 and have been of the utmost importance in building good will and sales. The last factor in the successful marketing of the books is efficient direct-mail advertising, based on the largest mailing list in the publishing trade.

Only by the most efficient operation of these five selling methods was Haldeman-Julius enabled to sell profitably for five cents the books he produced at a cost of one cent. An increase in the cost of materials will necessitate an increase in the price of the books after June 30, 1923, it has been announced.

By making sure of the demand for every book published and then issuing it in hundreds of thousands, as cheaply as modern machinery makes possible, Haldeman-Julius has built up, from the stand-point of quantity, at least, the greatest publishing business ever in existence.

A Week's Gleaning of Book-Trade News

¶¶BOOKS FOR CHILDREN are allotted each day a more important place in the sun. A regular monthly department of the International Book Review is now devoted to the subject. Hildegard Hawthorne auspiciously started the infant department on its career with a survey in the May issue.

¶¶THE ACTIONS, AND REACTIONS, of freshmen and seniors seem to monopolize the newspaper publicity given to colleges. You cannot recall a single instance of a sophomore or junior having been mentioned.

¶¶WELL, THE SENIORS UP AT YALE have announced to a breathlessly waiting world the names of the books they like to read.

¶¶OF COURSE THERE IS NO WAY of making sure they are telling the truth—but "Crossing the Bar" is their favorite poem!

¶¶DICKENS IS THE FAVORITE prose author, Stevenson came second, then Dumas, Mark Twain, Victor Hugo, Thackeray and Carlyle, Shaw and Wells and Emerson running neck-and-neck, and a rear guard composed of Tarkington, Fitzgerald, Kyne and Zane Grey.

¶¶AN ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF Melville's "Typee," similar to the edition of "Moby Dick" published last fall, is being prepared by Dodd Mead. Mead Schaeffer, whose colored pictures enlivened the pages of "Moby Dick," is now at work on the illustrations for "Typee."

¶¶IF YOU ARE GOING to the goldfields of Labrador, or to Newfoundland for any other reason, the 1923 edition of "The Newfoundland Year Book" will be a valuable and necessary part of your equipment. Garland's Bookstore of 117 Water St., E., St. Johns, N. F., has taken over all the remaining copies from the publishers and the book may be obtained only from it.

¶¶THREE OF THE LATER WORKS of Jules Verne which until now have never been published in English have been announced for publication by the English firm, Sampson Low, Marston & Company. The English title given to the books will be "Their Island Home," "The Castaways of the Flag," and "The Lighthouse at the End of the World."

¶¶AN UNUSUALLY LARGE first edition for a volume of verse has been issued by Reilly & Lee in publishing 50,000 copies of Edgar A. Guest's "The Passing Throng."

¶¶TWO NEW PLAYS by Maurice Maeterlinck will be published by Century in the autumn in a volume entitled "The Cloud That Lifted."

¶¶HOWARD VINCENT O'BRIEN completed a new novel a week or two ago and it is now in his publisher's hands. "Trodden Gold" is going very well.

¶¶KNOPF WILL PUBLISH a new novel, "Revolving Lights," which Dorothy Richardson has just written. This in a land where Prohibition is supposed to rule.

¶¶WILLIAM MCFEE, English novelist and marine engineer, has taken out naturalization papers with the idea of becoming an American citizen.

¶¶HARRY HANSEN REPORTS that the University of Chicago Press has published Horatio Hackett Newman's book explaining the little understood phenomenon of twinning—that is to say, he tells how twins happen. In two volumes, too, which is as it should be. Any one interested in twinning should send for Mr. Newman's book.

¶¶A LACK OF SPACE makes it impossible to publish all the book lists which each new dawn brings to a waiting world.

¶¶BUT WHEN THE LISTS are made by so many famous writers as, Hilaire Belloc, Henry Seidel Canby, Gertrude Atherton, Van Wyck Brooks, Christopher Morley, William Lyon Phelps, Maurice Francis Egan, Carl Van Vechten, John Erskine and Richard Le Gallienne something must be done.

¶¶SO WE WILL COMPROMISE (the individual lists are in the May International Book Review) and list the books receiving most votes: "The Dynasts" by Thomas Hardy, "Jean-Christophe" by Romain Rolland, "Plays" by John M. Synge, "Spoon River Anthology" by Edgar Lee Masters, "Hail and Farewell" by George Moore, "Eminent Victorians" by Lytton Strachey, "Pelle the Conqueror" by M. A. Nexö, "The Tragic Sense of Life" by Unamuno, "The Greek Commonwealth" by Zimmern, "The Everlasting Mercy" by Masefield, "Seven Men" by Max Beerbohm, "The Forsyte Saga" by Galsworthy, and "Joseph Vance" by De Morgan. The voters were asked to name the most important ten books of the twentieth century.

INVITATION TO PORTSMOUTH

Editor, PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

I should like to point out to all the book-trade who will have vacations in New England that they should be sure to visit on their trip the "Old Town by the Sea," Portsmouth, which is celebrating this year its three hundredth anniversary of settlement.

Every bookman ought to visit the "Old Nutter House," the boyhood home of Thomas Bailey Aldrich; then, there is the "John Paul Jones House," now the property of the Portsmouth Historical Society; the "Moffatt-Ladd House," now the home of the Colonial Dames; and nearby there are places made famous by Whittier, and numerous other historical landmarks.

From photographs, tools, prints showing various stages and the plates themselves can be studied the crafts of Japanese color printing, etching, wood engraving and lithography at the New York Public Library. On exhibition, to illustrate in the finest manner finished prints, is the work of some of the ablest American artists, a whole roomful of Japanese prints, valuable early German work of Granach and Albrecht Durer, and a group of Whistlers.

Clement Shorter is not worrying about the loss of English literary rarities. Commenting upon this subject in The Sphere, he says: "I am not among those who mourn the departure of our literary treasures to the United States. Shut up in private libraries, they can be of no great interest to individual bookmen; distributed they give a great deal more pleasure. There is a possibility that I may see more of these Britwell books if they go to Mr. Huntington's collection in California which he proposes to give to that State. There is very little chance that I should see them if they had remained a few miles from my own house—that is to say, at Burnham."

William Boyce Thompson, president of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, announces that one of the important objects of the association will soon be realized in the publication of a definitive collection of Roosevelt's works. According to Mr. Thompson, it will be "a worthy monument to the achievement of Roosevelt's versatile career as well as a tribute to the distinguished services which he in so many ways rendered to his country." The edition will be published under the auspices of the association by Charles Scribner's Sons and will be limited to 1,000 sets of twenty-four volumes each, containing all of Roosevelt's published works, besides numerous volumes of essays, addresses, and political papers. Among these will be characteristic speeches delivered by Roosevelt as Assemblyman from the Twenty-first New York District, as a delegate to the Republican convention of 1884, as United States Civil Service Commissioner and as candidate for Mayor of New York. The general editor will be Herman Hagedorn, director of the Roosevelt Memorial Association. Each volume will have an introduction by a writer who has been especially selected for the particular subject. "The publication of this collected edition," says Mr. Thompson, "is only the first step in a project in which the trustees of the Memorial Association are deeply interested."

There were collectors and book lovers of the early part of the nineteenth century in this country about whom we know little. One of these was Chancellor Kent, author of Kent's "Commentaries." When he removed to New York in 1793, he had already a small well chosen library. On his return to Poughkeepsie, less than a decade later, he wrote, "I have already collected a large and valuable library." In 1806, after he became chief justice, he wrote to his brother, "my library progresses in knowledge and value." In 1807, in the absence of his wife he wrote to her of his daily life, "my library has at present prodigious charms and incomprehensible interest. I pour over it all the day long, and enjoy the hard study and spare diet which many a wife has disliked as well as Milton's." The chancellor's love of books and his library continued to grow until in 1828 he could write: "My library, which started with nothing, grew with my growth, and it has now attained upwards of 3,000 volumes, and is pretty well selected, for there is scarcely a work, authority or document, referred to in my "Commentaries" but has a place in my own library. Next to my wife, my library has been the source of my greatest pleasure and devoted attachment." Columbia Law School, in its home on Morningside Heights, has reason to be thankful that Kent was a lover and collector of books. In the law library is his collection, made up of part of the legal library brought together by the chancellor. It consists of treatises, laws, American and English law reports, dictionaries, periodicals and works on the civil law. These books, appropriately rebound will be on exhibition during the Kent centenary in book cases presented to the law school by the Columbia University Law School Association. The Kent collection was presented to the university in 1911 by Edwin C. Kent, great grandson of the famous commentator.

THE CHEMISTRY OF COST

Quantitative analysis of manufacturing costs shows you the items that have advanced beyond reasonable explanation. The mounting cost of book plates brought the linoplate into being. Not only does this process bring plates to the old-time basis but it reacts favorably to every test of qualitative analysis. No more perfect printing surface can be produced in plates.

From every point of view linoplates are superior for single column book pages, except in those rare cases where two or more sets of plates are required.
